❖ Text of Section 57(iv)	272
Quantum of Deduction	272
Where income of assessee charitable educational institution was brought to tax as 'income from other sources' for reason that assessee was not registered as charitable trust under section 12AA, all incidental expenditures laid out by assessee wholly or exclusively for purpose of making or earning such income were also to be allowed under section 57(iii)	273
Co-operative Housing Society – Administrative expenses are allowable against the interest on fixed deposit	275
Where income of assessee charitable educational institution was brought to tax as 'income from other sources' for reason that assessee was not registered as charitable trust under section 12AA, all incidental expenditures laid out by assessee wholly or exclusively for purpose of making or earning such income were also to be allowed under section 57(iii)	276
Where assessee borrowed funds and utilised them for lending money to various parties, interest paid by assessee on money borrowed was to be allowed under section 57(iii) even if it did not earn interest income on money lent by it	276
Where assessee paid interest to sister concern on money borrowed and subsequently it earned interest income on Inter-Corporate Deposits (ICDs), since there was direct nexus between interest paid and interest earned, interest paid to sister concern was deductible under section 57 while bringing interest income to tax as 'income from other sources'	277
Bank charges claimed by assessee were disallowed where assessee failed to establish that said charges were directly related to earning of interest income from banks	277
Deduction under section 57 allowed if nexus exist between income earned and amount explained	277
Interest paid on borrowing to make investment in banks allowable	278
Where assessee-trust earned interest income on FDRs and bank account which was brought to tax under section 56, since assessee failed to establish that expenditures under several heads claimed against said interest income were incurred wholly and exclusively for purpose of earning of interest income, its claim for deduction under section 57(iii) could not be allowed	278
Where assessee-club received membership fee from various members which were kept in FDRs and interest earned thereon was brought to tax under section 56, in view of fact that assessee failed to establish nexus between expenditure incurred under various heads and earning of said interest income, its claim for deduction under section 57(iii) was to be rejected	279
Interest received on fixed deposits with bank could not be netted against interest paid on loan taken from same bank against security of said fixed deposits	279

Where shareholder subscribed certain debentures which was financed by LIC Mutual Funds on condition that debentures were subscribed in name of LIC and upon repayment of principal and all liabilities, same were to be handed over to assessee– Assessee was entitled to deduction of interest/service charges paid on funds raised	280
Where assessee was earning income from foreign securities through portfolio managers and duly offered same to tax, expenses paid to portfolio manager for safekeeping and administration of securities were allowable deduction under section 57(iii)	280
Where in order to claim credit facilities from bank, assessee borrowed money from his HUF and put same into FDRs which were pledged with bank as security, since interest on said FDR was shown as income of HUF, assessee could claim deduction of said amount in his return of income under section 57(iii)	281
Where motive of acquiring shares by assessee was to earn income and not to acquire controlling interest in company, interest on money borrowed for investment in shares of a company which yielded no dividend was an allowable deduction	281
Where interest and lease rent receivables were shown as 'income from other sources', on their writing off due to non-realisation, no deduction can be claimed either under section 57(iii) or under section 36	281
Where assessee having availed of loan from HSBC, advanced said amount to its holding company, i.e., SCL, since there was a direct nexus between earning of interest on loan advanced by assessee to SCL and payment of interest to HSBC on loan drawn in terms of sanction letter, assessee's claim for netting off of interest in terms of section 57(iii) was to be allowed	282
Where in course of assessment proceedings relating to subsequent assessment year, Assessing Officer received information that assessee had wrongly claimed deduction of interest under section 57 in respect of loan taken for purchase of residential house property, he was justified in initiating reassessment proceedings for relevant assessment year.....	282
It cannot be said that interest expenditure on borrowed capital shall be debited, only if any income is made or earned	283
Where interest received and interest paid by assessee had a commonality about their nature and character, revenue could not treat them differently for taxation purpose	283
Deduction under clause (iii) of section 57 is relatable only to expenditure incurred for purpose of earning income taxable under head 'Income from other sources'. Assessee had earned interest on loans given by it to its employees to purchase houses and motor vehicles. It accepted that such interest income was income from other sources falling under section 56 and claimed same to be set off against interest paid by it to NABARD for taking loan from it - When it was not case of assessee that interest being paid by it to NABARD was an expenditure incurred for purpose of earning interest income, it could not be allowed to set off interest income against interest paid to NABARD	284

Deductions - Assessee-mill during relevant assessment year did not have any business activity as its manufacturing activity did not start in that year. However, during that year, assessee had certain interest income from investments and claimed deduction of expenses incurred for maintenance of office and for planning of construction, etc., from interest income. Since expenditure incurred on maintenance of office and for planning of construction did not fall under any of sub-clauses of section 57, such expenditure could not be allowed as deduction from interest income	285
Assessee was a company-in-liquidation represented by its Official Liquidator - During course of his performance of duties, Official Liquidator incurred certain expenditure towards establishment charges, rent, taxes, rates etc. and received interest on fixed deposit - Since nature of expenses clearly showed that expenditure was incurred to protect and preserve assets and to maintain source which yielded income, it could be said that there was a connection or nexus between expenditure incurred and interest income earned by Official Liquidator - Therefore, entire expenditure incurred by assessee was deductible under section 57(iii).....	286
Expenditure incurred by way of stamp duty in order to file suit to recover amount advanced with interest from debtor, was allowable as deduction under section 57(iii)	286
